

Andy Smith, is the Chief of Brothers Who Care, he has been instrumental in steering the group from a grassroots organization that was focused on social change for African Americans to a group working to include all minority concerns. He is the editor of Speak Up Community News, a four-state news publication that promotes Culture, Health and Success. He manages grant-funded programs including the Minority Outreach & Technical Assistance (MOTA) program in Washington County, a State of Maryland project to help eliminate minority health disparities and promote health equity. He is the founder of the Hagerstown Public Access Corporation, a non-profit organization created to get a public access television channel in place for citizens of the Hagerstown area. He worked as an Information Technology professional in the Washington D.C. metropolitan area managing high profile tasks and assignments at Federal government sites. He is a board member of the Local Health Disparities Coalition in Washington County, Maryland and the Chair of the Tobacco Free Washington County Coalition. He is the Facilitator for the Neighborhoods 1st Medal of Honor Group in Hagerstown. He participated on the planning committee for the Western Maryland Fatherhood Initiative through the Washington County Department of Social Services. He holds a degree in Education. He is part of the teaching staff for Head Start of Washington County.